21 director;

23 limited-equity cooperatives, and was responsible for helping to create nearly 400 units of 24 housing and home ownership opportunities for District residents;

25 WHEREAS, the existence of many of the District’s most prominent limited-equity

32 WHEREAS, one of Leaks’ most significant achievements was her assistance with the 34 Capital View Town Homes, where public housing residents had been promised ownership of 35 their homes under the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development’s Turnkey III

36 program, only to have to fight for those ownership rights for over two decades;

37 WHEREAS, it is thanks to the tireless organizing efforts of people such as Linda Leaks,
38 sometimes referred to as “the Godmother of D.C. housing cooperatives,” that the District of 39 Columbia has the second-highest concentration of housing cooperatives in the United States;

40 WHEREAS, Leaks later brought the work of WISH to Johannesburg, South Africa,
41 resulting in the creation of among first housing cooperatives in South Africa;

42 WHEREAS, in addition to her work organizing housing cooperatives, Linda Leaks
43 advocated for the creation and funding of the Housing Production Trust Fund, as well as other 44 critical tenant-centered policies such as the tenant opportunity to purchase, rent stabilization, and 45 the creation of the District’s inclusionary zoning program;

46 WHEREAS, on October 5, 2023, Linda Leaks will be inducted to the “Cooperative Hall
47 of Fame,” and will be the first Black woman inducted in the field of housing justice in the Hall of
